

DEBATE ON BONUS BILL DRAGS ALONG IN SENATE

List of Senators Favoring Indefinite Postponement of Soldier Measure Steadily Grows.

URGE TARIFF LEGISLATION
Definite Action on Matter Expected to Follow Reading of Harding's Message, Which Will Be Sent to Congress Next Week.

[By Associated Press.]
WASHINGTON, July 8.—Debate on the soldier bonus bill dragged along in the Senate today while the list of Senators favoring indefinite postponement of action on the legislation through recommendation of the measure to the Finance Committee steadily grew in proportions. Leaders said they were assured of enough votes to put through such a program.

President Harding will send a message to Congress next week regarding the bonus bill and the pressing of tariff and tax legislation, but the exact date of its submission has not been determined. Definite action is expected to follow reading of the message.

Few Senators Follow Debate.
Less than a score of Senators followed the day's debate on the floor, marked by a criticism by Senator McCumber, Republican, North Dakota, the chief proponent of the bonus, of Secretary Mellon's letter declaring such legislation to be inadvisable at the present time in view of the condition of the Treasury.

Senator McCumber referred to yesterday's visit of President Harding to the Capitol, and asserting that the chief difference of opinion with respect to the legislation seemed to be on the point as to when it should become effective, added:

"I have heard neither the President nor the Secretary of the Treasury declare that to have it become operative July 1, 1922, as contemplated in the pending bill, would be too early a date."

"The Republican party should make good," declared Senator McCumber, "even if our party platform had not contained a pledge to the soldiers of America."

Despite the pleadings of the Secretary of the Treasury, despite the earnest plea of the President not to enter into new fields of expenditures, this Congress has appropriated millions to go into new enterprises. It appears this Congress seems bent on spending all of the money that can be raised by taxation. Why, then, should we expect a tidal wave of consternation to sweep the country if we pass a bill that will take $200,000,000 more from now and varying amounts thereafter and after thirty years no appropriation whatever?

Trends Account of the Advance.
Senator McCumber read accounts of the proposed $200,000,000 advance to the railroads and declared "no one has been scared by that." Reading over a list of expenditures required under several pending measures, such as the Townsend road bill, the Norris farm export bill, Senator McCumber asked, "Why hasn't the Secretary of Treasury looked upon these with concern?"

Several Democratic Senators, it was said, might seek to prevent recommendation in order to put the Republican majority on record definitely on the straight issue of compensating the veterans of the world war. These Senators, together with the bipartisan group advocating present enactment of bonus legislation, are expected to precipitate a hot fight when the move to recommit is made.

WAVE OF ECONOMY THREATENS NAVAL STATIONS OF EAST

A year has passed but what efforts were made in Congress to obtain increased appropriations for enlargement of the yards. As for parting with them altogether, even the economy demand is not expected to deter Representatives and Senators from fighting to retain these points of local pride.

Plan for Consolidation.
Navy heads up "that with a decreased appropriation from Congress, they had better consolidate some of the yards. Any money spent now on naval bases, they say, had better be directed to the Pacific, where facilities are declared to be inadequate. The recent enlargement of the Pacific Fleet, they add, makes it all the more imperative that base facilities be extended.

Millions of dollars are represented in the yards on the Atlantic seaboard. By abandoning some of them money would be gained which could be applied elsewhere, and still effect a reduction in current expenditures.

RAIL LABOR BOARD AUTHORITY DEFIED

declared the national agreements were continued in effect by the roads only because the rules were interwoven with wage questions.

J. T. Wallis, chief of motive power, detailed the open-shop policy of the Pennsylvania and declared that Federal control had intruded the unions in the railroads of the country.

Employees Favor System.
Mr. Gooden, chairman of the board, to show that employees were practically unanimous for the system federation. He declared that, despite this vote, the road refused to recognize the union committee. The company also held an election of committees, through which rules were subsequently agreed upon and put in operation, according to Pennsylvania representatives.

At the Altoona, Pa., shops the company employees are now under the new rules. L. E. Pieterman, blacksmith in the shops, testified. He said there was no likelihood of a strike.

The Pennsylvania case is the first big dispute which the board has been called upon to untangle as a result of its order referring the whole controversy to the roads for negotiation.

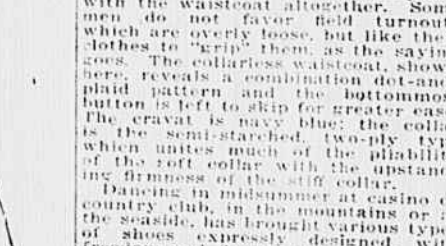

Meanwhile, failure to negotiate an entire set of rules to replace the national agreements has flooded the board with disputes. How it will dispose of them has not yet been decided. The national agreements' rules continue in effect until the controversy is settled, except where new rules have been agreed upon to replace the Federal control rules.

DESCRIBES HOW CLOTHES HELP IN MAKING MAN

By ALFRED STEPHEN BRYAN
OF WHICH has long been recognized in tropical countries, where dressing in season and in reason is imperative, if you would find life endurable. A spruce suit of Lovat-colored linen is portrayed in the second sketch. It is double-breasted and single-button with three patch pockets, and it contains a smart, thin, white shirt with a high collar, and a pair of trousers which curve to the figure, for their easy-breezy, knockabout air is their attraction. The trousers are finished with turn-ups, while omitted from town suits, are both seemly and sensible on country clothes.

person which are indecently, though expressively, called "grooming." All this may sound quite formidable, but it really isn't. The proper study of fashion is Man. Some of us are well favored by nature, and to others it has been less indulgent. To make the most of our gifts and to make the best of our shortcomings—that is the social and cultural significance of fashion as it is intelligently construed and wisely practiced.

Roundabout Casino and Country Club.
Sporting waistcoats, much worn abroad, are also inclining in favor on the right side of the Atlantic, where the tendency has been to dispense with the waistcoat altogether. Some men do not favor field turnouts which are overly loose, but like their clothes to "grip" them, as the saying is. The collarless waistcoat, shown in the first sketch, is a dot-and-plain pattern, and the bottommost of the cravat is left to skip for greater ease. The semi-starched, two-piece type of the soft collar, with the understated firmness of the stiff collar.

Dancing in mountain or at casino or country club, in the mountains or at the seaside, has brought various types of shoes, except those designed with freedom and flexibility in mind. The shoe of white buckskin with a plain oval toe, a thin, supple sole and a broad flat heel. This shoe is properly worn with trousers of white flannel, white gabardine, white doeking, white, black or white serge. It is a model to which young men, rather than oldsters, are partial, unless they happen stopped counting his birthdays.

Why Only One Straw?

Why not a few men own a dozen shirts or cravats, but only one straw hat is a riddle I do not pretend to unravel. An occasional comment from, say, a stiff-brimmed sailor straw hat, a flexible Bangkok weave, as illustrated above, would not only relieve the monotony of summer agreeably, but would freshen up one's looks agreeably. Such a straw is sometimes worn at sports in the manner shown. The block is the Alpine shape, belted at the sides and having a ribbed crown. The deep affair of the same stuff is the shirt, and the four-in-hand is the narrow scarf of polka-dotted, printed or solid silk.

Thin, cotton, batiste, nuns' cloth, dril, duck, wool, crash and the like are sheer-weight fabrics, the virtue of which is in their weight.

HOUSE BEGINS WORK ON FORDNEY TARIFF BILL

Author of Measure Discusses Attitude of Party With Reference to Helping Business Conditions.

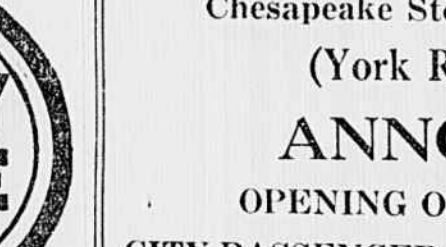

[By Associated Press.]
WASHINGTON, July 8.—The House got under way today in its consideration of the Fordney tariff bill, Chairman Fordney, of the Ways and Means Committee, after reading of the bill had been completed, in a speech of nearly two hours, developing the first phase of the Republican argument.

In his speech, Mr. Fordney discussed his party's attitude, what it proposed to do to remedy conditions and to help business. He dwelt only briefly on details of the rate and provisions touching them only incidentally or in reply to questions, but announced that other speakers would explain specific schedules in the measure.

Criticizing the position of the Democrats, Mr. Fordney said they had nounced the Republicans of drafting a measure which would cut off rather than encourage trade, when the cardinal policy of his committee had been to build a set of schedule which would restore commerce and industry to health. The committee's work always was actuated, he declared, by the knowledge that business risk was in a slump and should be given a tonic which would save it from the throes of foreign competition.

Compromises necessarily have been put in the bill, the speaker said, adding that all such contested points would be put before the House for its approval or rejection. At any rate, he informed the House, the committee did the best job of which it was capable, and he was willing to stand behind it to the hilt.

"The Republican party," he added, "has taken it for granted that the people spoke out loudly for protection."

IRISH-BRITISH ARMISTICE SIGNED; STARTS ON MONDAY

which are now engaged in seeking a settlement. Events moved swiftly today, both in London and Dublin. Not only has De Valera, contrary to the general expectation, consented to come to London to discuss with Lloyd George the basis on which settlement of the Irish question might be reached by the Prime Minister's proposed London conference, but a truce has been arranged to begin at noon Monday.

This has given reasonable assurance that the original conference, to which the Prime Minister invited the Irish Republican leader and Sir James Craig, the Ulster Premier, will be held.

Craig Called by King.
The day started happily, with the King summoning the Ulster Premier to a conference at Buckingham Palace. This, following upon the King's conference yesterday with General Jan Christian Smuts, the South African Premier, is an indication of the intense interest the King is taking in the Irish problem, and, although under the traditions of the British Constitution, the King has no real voice in the direction of government affairs, that does not prevent his exercising great influence in the policy of the country.

General Smuts is going to Chequers Court to spend the week-end, together with the other Premier, and the overseas dominions, with Lloyd George. General Smuts evidently is the influence in the negotiations, perhaps something more than mere influence, for lacking his active aid, it is hardly conceivable that events could have progressed as rapidly as they did today, and the fact that the Prime Minister has not stood upon the dignity of his office, but so generously is willing to discuss with De Valera the basis for a general conference, is considered full of hopefulness.

Macready in Conference.
The principal events of this important day, however, occurred not in London, but in Dublin, and the most striking was the sensational appearance of General Sir Nevill Macready, the military commander in Ireland, at the conference of Ramon de Valera and leading Southern Unionists, after his aid-camp had been sent in advance, presumably to ascertain whether his participation would be acceptable.

General Macready's appearance and long stay at the conference clearly had to do with Lloyd George's letter to Earl Middleton, one of the conference, in which the British government declared that it would be impossible to conduct negotiations with any hope of accomplishing satisfactory results if violence in Ireland continued, and insisted that the British government would give instructions to the troops and police to suspend active operations the moment De Valera declared his intention to enter the conference with the British government, and to order the cessation of all acts of violence by those under his control.

General Macready's presence at the conference has additional significance because it has been stated that the "Unionist party" in Ireland has been strongly opposing peace negotiations and any idea of a truce.

No Feinair Is Intermediary.
No report of the presence of De Valera's conference with the Southern Unionists has yet been issued, but it is believed that the principal topic discussed was a truce and that Ramon Duggan, a Sinn Fein member of Parliament who was released from Mountjoy prison only a few days ago, acted as intermediary between the conference and the Sinn Fein leaders.

Opinion still inclines to the idea that General Smuts, owing to the important part he has taken in the preliminary negotiations, will be the first chairman of the London conference, even if the latter stages, as a party, are not reached.

Everyday Ad-Ventures

The whole family was going away for a vacation—that is, the family of Laddie. They all agreed that an active young Laddie wouldn't fit in very well with the life at a seashore hotel.

Father thought it would be a fine idea if he could find somebody to take Laddie in to board for the summer. There wasn't a thing the matter with the idea, except that nobody seemed to want a canine guest for July and August.

He then tried to give Laddie away, but the summer seemed to be a bad time to find a suitable new owner.

As the time to go away drew nearer, the question of what to do with Laddie grew more desperate. Father almost gave up.

And then he inserted a Classified Ad in the Dispatch!

The next day three people called in response to his advertisement, and he found a very nice home for Laddie without any more "dog days."

ALLEGES MRS. KABER OFFERED HIM $3,000 TO KILL HER HUSBAND

to Mrs. Kaber's home with "Emma" Colavito, claimed by the State to have been the perpetrator of Mr. Kaber's assassination for Mrs. Kaber, when Mrs. Colavito asked Mrs. Kaber for money. Mrs. Kaber was alleged to have replied that she had no money. Mrs. Colavito then asked if she had any diamonds, the witness testified, adding that Mrs. Kaber then went upstairs and brought down a large diamond ring and a watch and gave them to Mrs. Colavito. This was alleged to have transpired after the murder of Mr. Kaber.

On cross-examination by Attorney Corrigan, Mrs. Schwartz said Mrs. Kaber came to her home frequently and that she observed Mrs. Kaber would run up and down the parlor, pull her hair and keep saying, "I didn't do it, I didn't do it."

The State tomorrow, through Police Detective Phil Mooney, expects to introduce the alleged confession of Salvatore Catala, claimed by the State to have been one of the assassins of Mr. Kaber.
